Resources for Coronavirus crisis

We have compiled details of publishers and content providers who are widening access to their resources in various ways, with details of the content and measures to access them. We have lists for both HE and FE. The lists are based on several sources, and thank you to those contributing to it. The Source information column indicates the source of the information:

- Responses from our survey to publishers as a result of the collective call to digital content and software providers issued on 20 March 2020
- The International Coalition of Library Consortia (ICOLC) two lists: COVID19 Complimentary Expanded Access Specifics and Information Services Providers - Public View
- Our community, with particular input from Jane Secker and Anthony Sinnott, The Northern Collaboration and National Acquisitions Group

The list is ongoing and will be updated as we receive survey responses and further information. Check the "Date added/updated" column:

Learning and Teaching Reimagined

What will teaching look like in the future?

We're bringing together the best of HE sector expertise to learn from recent rapid change, steered by an advisory board of vice-chancellors and principals, chaired by David Maguire, interim vice-chancellor and principal, University of Dundee.

What does learning and teaching reimagined look like, in readiness for 2021-22? How do we get there?

Your insights will help shape Jisc and Advance HE's development plans, ensuring we focus our activities, build capabilities and provide support for you now and into this new future.
